

What Church Should I Join?

Today there is no shortage of churches to choose from and it can be a confusing choice. With so many names, doctrines, practices, and worship experiences to ponder, many view the choice of which church much like standing in front of a candy rack choosing which candy bar they want. So many to choose from - today I think I like this one. Tomorrow it may be a different choice.

Still it is a serious matter and many have struggled to do the "right" thing. Others have chosen to remain loyal to their favorite group while others condemned all churches and went out to start their own religion. These facts cannot be disputed. Many speak of serving the Lord but are we to believe we can do so as we please or "see it?"

There is an answer to religious confusion so simple that it is often overlooked. Watch for it in these pages next week.
